ANNOUNCEMENTS

CPSC: New Mandatory Safety Standard

Following Congress passing the STURDY act as part of the omnibus appropriations bill in December 2022, the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) was required to review, analyze, and decide on whether or not to adopt the ASTM standard to protect children against furniture tipovers. This April, the CPSC voted in favor of adopting the new standard. This change will significantly reduce tipover-related deaths and injuries to children and protect families from preventable tragedies.

Amazon Reports on Action Against Counterfeits and Bad Actors

Amazon recently released a 2022 Brand Protection Report covering actions the company took over the last year to prevent counterfeit products, fraud, and other abuse. This includes the seizure and disposal of over 6 million counterfeit products, removing these potential hazards from the marketplaces and preventing them from entering consumers’ homes. A summary blog covering these and other actions can be found here, as well as the full report here.
